SOME EDUCATIONAL PLOBLEMS.

MANY QUESTIONS FOR TEACHERS.

Dr. Whitsett's Helpful Address—Prof. Joyner Discusses Literature in its Relation to Life—Prof. Wyche on English Work—The Journal of Education Endorsed—A Teachers' Association to be Organized Tomorrow.

The Institute met promptly, and America was sung by all the teachers present, after which Rev. A. G. Kirkman eonducte' devotional exercises.

"Pressing problems in education today," was the first topic considered by Dr. W. T. Whitsett. The minister leads in church work, the lawyer in legal advances, and the teacher must lead in the solution of the pressing educational problems of our day. The world-question is how to make man better; the only answer, true education. Compulsory attendance at school is one of the live Southern questions. There is nothing new in it. Joshua enforced it among the Hebrews; Solon among the Athenians; and Germany made the experiment over one hundred and fifty years ago. A score of States in our union have a statutory provision of compulsory education. Study the question; have an opinion. You must lead in reforms or be lead; choose. Local taxation for better schools is another vital problem. We must quicken our educational pace. Our towns have for years felt the value of a nine months, school, and local taxation has secured them admirable systems of graded schools, but these have not solved the rural problem that concerns the great wars of our children. Study the problem; arrive at conclusions; and help lead in the work of giving to North Carolina's 600,000 children worthy by proper preparation for the stern duty of American citizenship. Other questions demanding answer upon which the teacher should ponder are the securing of better teachers, more intelligent school supervisors, high schools for country communities, etc. In North Carolina we are in process of evolution in our educational work, it is the part of wisdom to give them direction. The opportunity is ours, we must not fail. Guilford county's more than ten thousand school children bid us lead them into light.

The committee on the organization of a Guilford county teachers' association reported about forty members as being already secured. The committee was continued until tomorrow and an additional committee on election of officers and permanent organization was appointed, consisting of Supt. Wharton, Prof. Wyche, J. V. Dick and V. P. Hammer. These will report tmorrow and a permanent organization of the association will be effected. The teachers are very enthusiastic along this line and seem anxious for a good, live association.

History was the next subject, and Dr. Whitsett said it might be properly defined as an opening of that window of the mind that looks out upon the panorama of the ages; the passing deeds of the march of humanity over the field of time. A proper teaching of history is only possible when the teacher sees it as related to man's struggle towards his higher attainment. It involves the practical sciences of political economy, sociology, law, race relation, etc. It involves a study of those dynamic forces that change the current of humanity's stream. Teach facts, but only in relation to their causes, effects and philosophy. Read facts in the light of actuating motives With history teach patriotism, and civic duty. From individual experience widen the child's horizon until it sweeps his county, State and nation—yes, the world. Avoid dry and meaningless dates, but clothe them with ideas, and preceding and succeding causes and effects. Use outlines; group related things. Let the student first of all fix in mind firmly the commonly accepted sub-divisions as a basis for work: Ancient history from creation, 4,004, B. C., to fall of Rome, 476, A. D. (say 4,500 years); middle ages, 476 A. D., to 1492, A. D., to 1900, A. D. (say 1,000 years). With this as a basis historical periods can easily be classified intelligently. As an illustration a sketch was given upon the blackboard and rapidly explained, showing early settlements in North Carolina, and the State's history from 1584 until the civil war. An outline showing briefly the story of the thirteen original colonies was also given. A map of Guilford county was also exhibited and historical suggestions made. The historic, the social, the moral, can all be taught in their relations.

Prof. J. Y. Joyner, who was in attendance at the Institute, was next introduced to discuss literature in its relation to life. After a beautiful tribute to the teaching profession he passed to consider the noblest thought of the noblest men who have lived in the tide of time. True literature is the very life blood of the race. It crystallizes the glory of all human achievement, and tells the story of life's drama. The glory and sweetness of mental and spiritual activity as exemplified in the heights of attainment by time's true heroes,—all this is to say reposing in the wealth of lifetime which is ours. The glorious, sublime expressions of the great God in stone, in tree, in running brook and tossing ocean; all these we recall when we ponder the possibilities of human expression of thought as revealed in pathos, beauty, sublimity—expression, "the glory and the freshness of a dream." The subtlest thought, the boldest flight of wildest imagination, godlike thought that crowds the brain—all this may find fit form in fitting expression and stand a sweet reality to other men. In iron and brass and wood, men give expression to architectural dream; in word and poem and classic prose men give form to heart concepts that embrace in their sweep all that ranges from the finite to the infinite in humanity. The strings of human existence sweep out no songs that may not burn and thrill again on classic page. The power to think and feel can move others but little until cultivated expression, as the finger of thought, gives permanent record in perfected expression. Thought stands shorn of power until given the wings of cultivated expression.

Prof. Wyche in his continuation of English work in composition, grammar, literature, etc., showed how in Indian life the great ideas of eternity, sin, duty, courage, etc., found life and being in the Indian's struggle to give them body and form. Back of all the folklore of Indian, Norse, and Negro life in standing great cardinal and eternal ideas that have been clothed in story even in the infancy of races. Truth ever new and beautiful shines out when we properly consider even these rude expressions. Dry, dead, bones of technical rule will never come to vitality until touched by the living heart of appreciation and humanity.

The meeting of the teachers yesterday afternoon was so well attended that another afternoon session was announced for today at 3:30 p. m.

The work for tomorrow and Friday will be important and helpful, and the teachers seem to enjoy their work.

A number of visitors and quite a number of new arrrivals on the part of the teachers showed combined interest.

The North Carolina Journal of Education was highly endorsed today, and special atttention was directed to the helpful educational spirit of the press press generally over the State.

CONGER IS HEARD FROM AGAIN.

BETWEEN JULY 30 AND AUGUST 2.

Says That the Chinese Government is Anxious for the Ministers to Leave Pekin, But the Latter Knows That Certain Death Awaits Them Should They Do So--Li Hung Chang Says That the Chinese Must Fight if the Allies Attempt to Enter Pekin.

By Wire to the Telegram

Washington, Aug. 8.—The Chinese minister went to the State Department this morning to hand in a message from his government, which he intimated had some bearing upon the imperial edict of August 2d, regarding the foreigners leaving Pekin. Minister Wu said today that he presumed the message received last night from Conger was a reply to the last message he had forwarded to the American minister from Secretary Hay. Concerning the contents of Conger's message he was inclined to refrain from talking, and said that the attitude of his government had not changed, and that it was his firm belief that war would not be declared by China against the allied powers.

THE MESSAGE FROM CONGER.

Washington, Aug. 7.—Another cablegram came to the State Department, late this afternoon, from Minister Conger, at Pekin—the second that has come direct from him since June 12. It is the first which has come direct from the minister since the above date, the other having been received through the intermediacy of the Chinese minister here, Mr. Wu. Today's telegram shows that the situation in the Chinese capital is still a very serious character, that the ministers are still in danger from the Chinese troops and that their supplies of ammunition and provisions has been reduced to a very considerable extent. So important were the statements contained in the dispatch that a conference was held by wire between several of the officials here and the President at Canton, lasting for several hours. At its conclusion the cablegram from Mr. Conger was made public as follows:

Washington, Aug. 7—The following cablegram from Minister Conger was received tonight, by the State Department:

"Tsin Nan Yamen, Aug. 7.

"To the Secretary of State:

"Still beseiged. Situation more precarious. Chinese government insisting upon our leaving Pekin, which would be certain death. Rifle firing upon us daily by imperial troops. Have abundant courage, but little ammunition or provisions. Two progressive Yamen ministers beheaded. All connected with legation of the United States well at the present moment.

"CONGER."

The cablegram came in the official cipher of the Department. It is undated, like Mr. Conger's previous cable, but from the internal evidence furnished by his reference to the beheading of two members of the Tsung Li Yamen and to the insistence of the Chinese government on the removal of the ministers from Pekin, State Department officials say, it may be assigned a date not earlier than July 30, and perhaps not later than August 2. It is checked by the telegraph company as having been put on the wires at Tsi-Nan, a large city about 80 miles southeast of Pekin, on August 7. The dispatch reached the Department at 4:20 p. m., but was not made public until late in the evening. Those who were at the White House in conference with the President included acting Secretary Adee, of the State Department, Secretary Root and Adjutant General Corbin.

What the result of the conference was the officials declined to say That it will stimulate the energies of the government to its utmost to endeavor to press forward the advance movement towards Pekin is certain, for Mr. Conger's message makes it clear that for the ministers to leave Pekin would result in their death. Secretary Root did not care to make any statement when asked about the situation tonight. The officials had been led to believe from the more recent dispatches which had purported to emanate from Chinese sources, as well as from imperial edicts, that the condition of the legationers was much improved, but today's advices show a very different aspect of affairs.

ABSOLUTELY IMPOSSIBLE SAYS LI.

London, Aug. 8, 3:45 a. m.—"In case the troops advance the Chinese must fight. The suggestion that the allies should be allowed to enter Pekin in order to escort the ministers to Tien-Tsin is absolutely impossible."

This is the dictum of Li Hung Chang. It was transmitted last evening to Mr. William Pritchard Morgan, Member of Parliament for Merthyr Tyrdvil, by his agent at Shanghai. The agent had carried to Earl Li a message from Mr. Morgan, urging that the allied troops be allowed to enter the capital and stating that a settlement could be made at Tien-Tsin, whereby a war of the world against China would be averted; but even the optimistic Li failed to hold out the slightest hope of its feasibility, although he reiterated to Mr. Morgan's agent his declaration that the ministers had left Pekin, fixing the date of their departure as August 2.

EXPENSE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Disbursements $1,800 Ahead of the Receipts—A Majority of the Votes West of Greensboro Were Cast for the Amendment—The Southern Removes its Durham Case.

Special Correspondence of the Telegram

Raleigh, Aug. 8.—Democratic State Chairman Simmons said today that Governor-elect Aycock's canvass was the most remarkable ever made in North Carolina. He added that there never was a campaign in which the press rendered such splendid and efficient service. He says that leaving out the counties east of Raleigh the constitutional amendment received 20,000 majority, and leaving out those east of Greensboro it received 7,000 majority.

Attorney Charles Price of the Southern railway was here yesterday and says the Southern will be entirely ready for the hearing of the tax assessment cases, which will be resumed before standing master James E. Shepherd, at Charlotte, next Tuesday.

The Southern Railway has secured an order from Judge Purnell here removing from Durham county Superior Court to the U. S. Court, the case involving the Southern's right-of-way in the town of Durham. This case is a noted one. It is another phase of the long and bitter fight between the Southern and the Seaboard Air Line The Southern owns the Oxford and Clarksville railway, the Seaboard the Durham and Northern. The latter lately bought the D. & N. stock held by the town of Durham. The Southern said in its petition for removal that from prejudice and local influence it would not be able to obtain justice in Durham Superior Court or any other State court to which it had the right under State law to remove it.

Senator Butler left for home yesterday. It is widely rumored that he will remove from this State. There is certainly no future for him in North Carolina.

Spencer Blackburn, Republican nominee for Congress, says he thinks he will carry his district, the 8th, by a good majority. The Democrats say they intend to give him the biggest fight of his life.

There is beginning to be some talk of who will be U. S. Senator, as Butler's successor. Some Populists intimate that Butler will give the Democrats trouble in the matter of electing and seating his successor. That is all talk, idle talk, of course. In the talk about the succession F. M. Simmons is now most prominently mentioned.

The Democratic State campaign was necessarily expensive. As one item, 5,000,000 campaign documents were sent out. The expense exceeded the receipts by some $1,800. The largest single contribution was $500, by any individual.

This month's report of the State Board of Health says there was small pox in 19 counties; in all, 125 cases. Forty counties report measles and in nearly half of these it was epidemic.

TWO THINGS PROMISED.

The People Have a Right to Expect That the Free Schools Shall be Adequatly Improved and That New Issue Shall Come to the Front.

Biblical Recorder.

1. We have it promised that the free schools shall be greatly improved. Mr. Aycock and all the men who have helped him campaign have promised this. We shall look for no palty dealing with this promise, no little provision in fulfillment of so great a promise. But we shall look for such provision for the free schools that in every county, they may be maintained at least four months in reach of all the children; and that teachers shall be paid a sum sufficient to command men and women of ability and preparation. To this end let every reader take his stand now.

We have it promised that new issues shall be introduced in North Carolina, and that every man shall be respected in his consideration and treatment of them. Henceforth, if a citizen desires to vote for a Prohibition candidate, let that man who charges that he is dividing the people for evil be discountenanced. If one decides that he is bound to vote for the administration's present policy in the world at large and especially in our new possessions, rather than for an interruption and reversal of that policy, let the man who differing with him undertakes to do other than candidly persuade and reason with him be regarded as the worker of evil and unpatriotic. And so with all issues. Let us have, first, honorable questions. Let us have, secondly, respect each man's right to vote his mind.

These two better things we have had promised as from a thousand platforms. We have the right to demand them.

Hold Up on Church Cream.

Church festival ice cream is not popular in Evansville, Indiana, now. Three or four hundred people who lunched on some a few nights ago were made very sick, some narrowly escaping dying None of them are hankering for ice cream now

WHAT'S IN A NAME ?

Optician, Optist, Opticist, Oculist!

This poor letter O is being overworked nowadays to find some uniform title for the man who fits glasses scientifically. Some objection to the word optician is found, in the fact that every peddler and street fakir who sells glasses may assume title, but the same objection applies to the other names in greater or less degree. We, ourselves, find it matters very little what one calls oneself, so one's work is well performed. We have fitted glasses to a large number of eyes in this vicinity. Our work speaks for itself and our customers speak for us.

MR. BRYAN'S NEAT SPEECH.

Was Not Sure That He Was Nominated—The Party Arrived At Indianapolis—Leaders in Conference.

Indianapolis, Aug. 7.—William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and Adlai E Stevenson, of Illinois, reached this city at 7 o'clock, this evening. They came on a special train of 12 coaches, all filled with enthusiastic Democrats Stops were made of some length at Kankakee, Ill., and Lafayette, Ind. Large crows gathered at every station and cheered lustily whether the train stopped or not. Ten cars of the train were occupied by members of the Cook County Democracy. The eleventh was for the use of press representatives. In the last coach were Messrs. Bryan, Stevenson, their families and friends. and Chairman Jones, of the national committee, and his wife, Governor and Mrs. Thomas, of Colorado, Secretary Walsh and Sergeant-at-Arms Martin, of the national committee, and many of the leading members of that organization. Hon. Samuel Alschuler, Democratic candidate for Governor of Illinois, Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, and Webster Davis, former Assistant Secretary of the Interior, were also among the guests.

Conferences between the leaders of the party who were brought together for the first time since the Kansas City convention filed the afternoon. The tone of the conferences was generally very hopeful. Senato Jones expressed himself as especially pleased with the outlook in New York State. He said he accepted the Democratic platform in toto, but that he would devote himself, especialy in his speeches, to the exploitation of the subject of imperialism.

At Kankakee the first speaking of the tour was indulged in. The streets around the depot were jammed. Mayor Harrison introduced Mr. Bryan, saying he believed firmly that the patriotism and good sense of the American people was too great to place in the office of President a man who did not represent the plain people as Jackson and Lincoln represented them. Mr. Bryan was such a man, and he took great pleasure in introducing him. Mr. Bryan said:

"I am a very cautious man, and while I have seen it stated in the papers that I was nominated for the presidency, I know you cannot always trust what you see in the papers. (Laughter.) And I am not going to take it for granted that I am nominated until I am officially notified of it down in Indianapolis. I do not want to make a speech as the presidential candidate, until I am sure that I am nominated. (Laughter.) Mr. Stevenson, the nominee for the vice-presidency, is along, and Governor Thomas, of Colorado, who is to notify him of his nomination, is on the train and I believe has privately informed him that he has been nominated, and therefore he has more reason for making a speech than I, and I take pleasure in presenting to you your candidate for Vice-President, who is, I hope and believe to be the next Vice-President of the United States, Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson. (Applause.)

The Mars' Hill Conference.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

Mars Hill, Aug, 6 —The Conference met at 10 o'clock a. m., Saturday, and the first subject taken up was "How to fill the Sunday school." Short talks were made by Rev. W. E. Wilkins, Rev. O L. Stringfield, Josiah Sams, and Rev. A. B. Bennett, followed by an address by Rev. O. L. Stringfield on "How a poor boy gets and education." Twilight services were held in the tabernacle.

The Conference reconvened at 9:45 Sunday a. m. in a Sunday school mass meeting, after which a business meeting of the Conference was called and the following officers elected for the coming year: T. M. Honeycut, president; O. E. Sams, vice-president; Luther Jarvis, secretary. A committee was appointed to decide on the time for holding the next conference. At 11 o'clock Rev O. L. Stringfield addressed the audience on "The Education of Women," and his plea for the education of our women, was one of the strongest ever heard in this State, and was listened to with rapt attention throughout its entire delivery. Twilight services were held in the tabernacle at 8 o'clock, where Bro. Stringfield preached an eloquent sermon on "The Blood of Christ," which will not soon be forgetten by those who were so fortunate as to hear it. J C L

WAY OF THE OSTRICH

OBSERVATIONS BY ONE WHO RAISES THEM.

The Male Ostrich Has But One Mate and the Female Is Rather Stupid—Ostrich Amusements Are of a Peculiar Character.

The Phoenix, Arizona, herd of ostriches inhabits an alfalfa pasture of forty acres, three miles north of the city. The herd is second in size in America, numbering 175 birds, the largest herd being at Fullerton, Cal., and numbering 300 birds.

The first birds brought from South Africa to America for breeding purposes came to California in 1882. In 1888 fourteen chicks from this herd were brought to Phoenix for exhibition, and were bought by Josiah Harbert, who proposed to breed them. The purchase was made during the summer and Mr. Harbert put the young birds in coops, carefully covered the coops with cloths to keep out the sun, and drove out to his home in Alhambra. All the birds but two were smothered to death during the trip. It being impossible to distinguish between the sexes in young ostriches, and fearing he had no male bird, Mr. Harbert purchased one of the male birds brought from Africa. The 175 birds constituting the present herd are his descendants. He has been honorably retired, and with the dignity befitting his patriarchial position he knocks the stuffing out of everything that comes within his reach. It was not long ago that he engaged M. Pickrell, President of the Arizona Ostrich Company, in an impromptu "scrap," and while Mr. Pickrell is a husky old bird himself and was armed with a wooden pitchfork, old "Oom Paul" hit him one welt and knocked him out for several days.

The ostrich is a monogamist. At least he has but one wife at a time. The match-making is arranged by the human keeper, who puts each pair of birds in a separate corral. Mr. Ostrich is likely to consider the question of marriage for some days after he is introduced to his partner, and much thought on the question colors his shins and beak a bright red. When he finally determines that a family should be reared, he digs a nest in the ground. He then drives his mate up to the nest and calls her attention to it by giving her a kick. If she is dull of comprehension, and she usually is, he continues to kick her and scold her. and his voice much resembles the roar of the lion. He is often compelled to go to the extreme of kicking her over the 8-foot fence forming the corral.

She finally, however, sees her duty and begins to lay eggs which average three pounds in weight. The first two or three eggs are not fertile and will not hatch. This fact, curiously enough, is known to the mother and she lays them outside the nest. But in this there is a wonderful provision of nature

On the African desert the nesting of the wild birds is done in the hills or mountains, far from water and the haunts of beasts or men. But while the nest may be many miles from water, the first requirement of the chick when he comes from the shell is water or its equivalent in liquid food. Hence the necessity of the two or three sterile eggs, which the mother breaks after her brood is born, and on which the chicks live until they are strong enough to travel.

Left to her own judgment the hen lays perhaps ten eggs, at the rate of one in two days, and when the nest looks comfortably full, the incubation begins. But the artifice of man deceives her. He systematically takes the eggs from the nest, and as long as her work seems to be unfinished the hen continues to produce eggs. By this system two hens on the Phoenix farm last year produced fifty eggs each. She cannot be deceived, however, as to the sterile eggs. If they are put in the nest she will continue to pull them out, and will finally quit laying and abandon the nest.

About fifteen eggs constitute a setting, and the period of incubation is forty-two days. The male bird does the greater share of this labor. He takes charge of the nest at 5 o'clock in the evening and remains with it until 9 o'clock in the morning, when the female takes charge. At noon he relieves her for an hour, while she lunches, and she then keeps house until 5 o'clock.

One of the most interesting characteristics of the ostrich is the manner in which he takes what may be called his "constitutional." Every morning at sunrise the herd of young males engages in a foot race, which concludes in a combination cake walk and reel. In single file they will race around the pasture at a two-minute gait, until thoroughly limbered up, and then suddenly forming in a group go through gyrations that suggest the waltz, the Virginia reel, the cake walk and the "happy jag." It is a grotesque performance, but there is a singular grace in the birds' play, and when they are in full plumage, with their great wings spread, the sight is beautiful.—Phoenix Graphic.

Bound to Depart.

A youthful Stockton man rushed to catch a river boat for San Francisco, but was about two minutes late. The steamer was six feet out as he reached the dock. He swung his grip aboard and, jumping, caught a rope and a post and held fast. Everybody imagined he had fallen in. The captain, peering over the side, saw his intrepid passenger. "Here, you," he shouted, "by jiminy crickets, don't you ever do that again!" The passenger had hauled himself aboard by this time, and, turning a look of scorn at the captain, said, "What do you think I'm going to do—jump back and try it over?"

FREE NIGGERS AND BOND WHITES.

There are some folks who appear to be very solicitous that the niggers in Luzon shall be free and equally desirious that white men in North Carolina shall be bondsmen. Elsewhere in this paper we print a part of two editorials, one from a religious paper, the Biblical Recorder, and the other from a Democratic, political, paper, the Newberne Journal, both concerning the effects of the amendment. The latter, too, concerning the attempt already made to force the effort in behalf of Bryan to be run on the race issue.

These articles are significant, for they speak the sentiments of a large number of people of North Carolina Independence and freedom were promised by the amendment and they shall be had. If that instrument stands the race question in politics has been settled in North Carolina for the present, and if the people do not emphatically say so, and refuse to listen to any attempt to revive it in behalf of Mr. Anybody, we are much deceived. Let the people be for Mr. Bryan, he is worthy of their love and admiration and votes a dozen times on a dozen grounds, but not one time on a revival of race prejudice. And the man who dares try to put him on the people on such unworthy grounds, does so at the peril of having them reject him. North Carolinians are free now, and they will vote for whom they please, judging him by his merits and the merit of what he stands for.

The Telegram is for Mr. Bryan; it hopes to see him elected; it has good reasons for its opinions, but it would dispise him and itself if it had no other reason than the "color line," and if his managers attempt to set up this as his chief badge of distinction, there are North Carolinians who would prefer to see him defeated. As the Journal so forcibly says, the race question is settled, and the voice of the people is that it shall not be unsettled.

We salute another reformer; like all reformers a blessing to mankind. Hear:

President Harper, of the University of Chicago, is greatly interested in the possibility of living on $300 a year. He remarked to friends that he was determined to try for one week to see if he could provide for his family table at an expense of 15 cents a day for each member, according to the schedule furnished by Miss Katharine Davis. He explained that he could not begin the experiment until after the celebration of his silver wedding tomorrow, at Concord, Ohio, as he did not want to miss the big family dinner supplied by Ohio relatives.

We don't know which to most admire in President Harper, his desire to be a reformer and show people how to live on fifteen cents per day (many already thoroughly understand it) or his intense human nature as manifested in the desire to eat a square meal at the expense of his relatives.

We congratulate Mr. Charles A. Towne in refusing, as is shown in his resignation of the vice president candidacy, to further be a cat's paw of Butler. That fellow now has nothing to trade on and it is now assured that we will not be in the Watson-Sewall predicament of 1896.

THE CENTRAL CAROLINA FAIR.

The people of Greensboro and this entire section are to be congratulated that the Central Carolina Fair is not only assurred as a permanency but is making satisfactory progress toward giving a creditable opening next October. There is every resson why Greensboro should have the leading fair of the State, being so admirably situated as to be able fully to carry out the idea suggested in the name—that it shall be a fair for Central Carolina.

Perhaps our people do not fully realize yet the immense benefit that this institution will be to Greensboro. Taking even this view of the matter, it will pay over and over every enterprise in Greensboro to take stock in the fair. Dollars invested in bringing the immense crowds which can thus surely be brought to town, will return tens in increased business.

The merchants should contribute largely to the premium list. Some have already done so; every one should do so. Aside from the actual cash value of the prizes thus offered by individuals, there will be the other and larger value that will come to the Fair management from a realization that the people are behind them and are ready to co-operate in any forward movement

Let's all pull hard for a great big success, and one that will insure the permanency of the Central Carolina Fair!

NOTHING TO FEAR.

The Telegram has expressed the opinion more than once that North Carolina need have no fear of a reduction of its representation in Congress in proportion to votes cast instead of according to population, as at present. We are glad to find this opinion substantiated by so able and well known a paper as the New York Evening Post, which says:

Nine men out of ten of the educated classes, when asked privately what they think of negro disfranchisement, will say that they wish the franchisement could be restricted in the North also, and that voting could be limited by property and educational tests. While this feeling pervades the influential classes of the North, it is needless to say that the South has nothing to fear from outside interference with constitutional amendments, her 'grandfather clauses,' her tissue ballots or her falsities of any kind at the polls.

Public opinion moves by action and reaction just as certainly as a pendulum swings back and forth. The last swing in regard to the franchise was in the direction of extreme liberality, and culminated in the astounding enfranchisement of the negroes. The reaction is now in progress and is manifest in such expressions as the one quoted above, by the restrictions proposed in our new possessions, and by the comparatively quiet acquiescence of the country in the restrictive measures of the South.

And if other evidence that North Carolina will not be disturbed in reaping the fruits of her history we submit this expression of Chairman Hanna to a representative of the Baltimore Sun:

Senator Hanna was asked if he thought that the recent election in North Carolina would have any effect upon the election next fall. The question was not answered directly, but the questioner inferred from what Mr. Hanna said that he believed the State would, before many years, become a strong Republican Commonwealth.

"I have been told," said he, "by persons who are in a position to know that the greater part of the white people, being descendants of Whigs, are really Republicans at heart, and on national issues would not be at variance with the doctrine of the Republican party."

We do not see any reason why North Carolina should become a Republican State, but if Mr. Hanna does, we are very well satisfied with this as a reason why no effort will be made to reverse the work of last Thursday.

is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking post, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. Shop Newly Equipped

I have just completed equipping my shop with power and machinery for doing all classes of repair and new work. I am now amply prepared for doing heavy wood work, and also heavy forging. When in need of any kind of repairs very often the time saved by having it done promptly will pay for the same; and besides machinery does work better and cheaper than muscle.

I am now prepared to build on short notice any kind of a wagon you may want—a heavy dray, light spring wagon, or a farm wagon.

Most newspaper advertisers know that they do not need to entrap people into reading their ads, but only to tell a straightforward tale. The same impulse that leads people to look into a show-window causes them to read the advertising columns. There they often discover a want that had not occurred to them, besides gaining a great deal of varied and sometimes useful information.

FOR POLITICAL FREEDOM.

The Vote Cast Last Week Was Such and the People Will Not Submit to be Again Enslaved.

Newbern Journal.

So far as Newbern, Craven county and this section of North Carolina is concerned, the white men declared for political freedom on August 2nd, and they propose to continue free.

So far as the colored citizen of Newbern is concerned, he is going to be allowed every right of a just citizenship.

If he is entitled to register he can vote.

If he is not entitled to vote, he can enjoy all other priviliges in this community and will be held amenable to law the same as any white man.

And so far as politics are concerned, the citizens of Newbern will not raise any cry of "nigger" against any voter who proposes to vote for the McKinley ticket or any ticket, Prohibition, Populist, Socialistic or Anarchistic.

The truth is that the citizens of Newbern and this section do not propose to throw off one political yoke for the sake of putting on another.

If this dictum of the News-Observer was possible what would the fight on August 2nd. amount to? For accepting the News-Observer's position, its declaration means that every voter must be prohibited from even thinking on National affairs, or discussing them with the idea of voting according to the voter's judgment.

Should the white voters of Newbern follow the News-Observer it would mean the continuation of the same race fight, the posecution of honorable white men who believe in the present administration, men who stand in good repute and have the confidence of the community.

The vote cast here on August 2nd was for political freedom, and now that such conjuring as the News-Observer attempts by crying "nigger," is not going to be accepted in Craven county, nor in any other county in North Carolina.

A SHOOTING IN MECKLENBURG.

A Farmer, Watching His Melon Patch is Fired Upon—Wounded Men Not Yet Well. A Young Robber.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

Charlotte, Aug. 8.—Mr. George Jordan of Denta, five miles from Charlotte, was one of the participants in a very interesting as well as dangerous shooting affair which nas just come to light. Mr. Jordan, some time ago, missed watermelons from his patch and set himself out to watch for the thief.

The enemy soon appeared and Mr. Jordon was almost routed, although he had a Winchester shotgun, by the negro's suddenly opening fire first with a pistol.

The negro escaped and was not heard from until recently when another negro let the cat out of the bag by saying that Clayton Little was the thief. Little had just run away with the wife of the negro informant, hence the clearing up of the mystery. Geo. Leipsic, the deserted husband, says that Little was hit by Mr. Jordan's shots. Little is in hiding.

HAND BOOK BINDING

WOMEN WHO MAKE A SUCCESS OF IT.

A School in New York Where It Is Taught—The Price of Most Artistic Work—The Princess of Wales a Bookbinder.

(New York Letter.)

Ever since the Middle Ages, when patient monks toiled day after day and year after year illuminating with loving art the sacred text, there have been book lovers who valued a book not for its object matter, but for its artistic binding. The majority of Americans accustomed to poor type, poorer paper and poorest binding would think it a great extravagance to pay $100 or more to have a favorite volume rebound in a fashion worthy of the nobe thoughts expressed.

To the inexperienced eye the handmade "tooled" book covers do not look very different from the cheap stamped patterns of the bargain counters. But the book lover cannot be deceived. He holds the volume tenderly and looks for the distinguished mark of this or that master with eager, loving eyes. The handsome book covers will never become popular, because it is only the wealthy man or insatiable book collector that would dream of paying hundreds of dollars for a book. But as money is no object to the wealthy book lover, so in many cases money is no object to the men and women who do the binding. They are governed by the same impulse that rules a painter or sculptor, the ideal striving to make itself palpable.

Book-binding offers a congenial occupation for women of original ideas and artistic tastes. It is not a craze suitable for a woman dependent upon her own resources, for the field is necessarily limited and the returns smaller, or, to speak properly, slow.

Until recently it was impossible for a woman to master the art of bookbinding in America. The greater number of women whose work is in demand received their instruction abroad, principally at the famous Dove bindery in London, founded by Cobden-Sandenson. In the ordinary shops women are only allowed to stitch the leaves. But now the Nordhoff Bindery in New York gives a young woman every opportunity to acquire the secrets of the craft. This school has been established by the friends of the late Evelyn Hunter Nordhoff, a pioneer among women in the art, and whose untimely death prevented her carrying out the plan herself.

Miss Nordhoff was particularly adapted for this line of work. She understood ornamental leather work, she was a good etcher on copper and was not only a clever designer, but a cultured woman, with the breadth of understanding that much travel and diversified associations invariably bring.

Bookbinding necessitates close application and considerable outlay. The first cost of learning is great, and the tools and materials employed are very expensive. The beautiful leathers are extravagantly high, and many have to be especially imported for the purpose.

In binding a book by hand the first step is to take the leaves in sections and sew them in the back. All are sewn on a common cord, which forms a hinge for the books to turn on. This is called flexible sewing and is used in other binderies, mostly for bibles, law books, dictionaries and other heavy books that are to be frequently used.

Then the back is glued. But in the Nordhoff Bindery very little glue is used, the sewing being depended upon for strength in holding the leaves in place.

The book is now ready for the covers, and the edges are made even and smooth by what are known as the plow and press.

The head-bandings, the bits of bright color at the top and bottom of a volume, can be made by embroidery silk, woven in and out with three needles.

The lettering is the finishing touch. The title may be put on in single-handle letters, which in England is always done, or the type is set up all on one palette and the whole name is put on at once.

One woman, Mrs. Henry W. Grimwood, being unable to obtain instruction in the ordinary binderies, studied the whole subject out from J. W Zachnsdorf's "Treatise on Practical Bookbinding." She declared this to be very comprehensible and comprehensive, as it ought to be, since he is one of the masters of the handicraft.

Many women in England have taken up bookbinding. The Guild of Woman Binders has sixty members, and included several women whose names have become well known as artists in the bookbinding. The Princess Victoria of Wales is an enthusiastic bookbinder and has done some very creditable work, it is said. She obtained several prizes in an exhibition some time ago, having entered her work under the name of Miss Matthews, as she did not wish her rank to influence the decision of the judges.

But after the mechanical details are mastered, the real test remains that must determine whether a woman shall receive recognition in this craft or not. She must be original in her designs and must have the discriminating taste which determines which material, color or embellishment is best suited to the subject treated of in the book.

A French novel or a volume of modern verse requires a very different treatment and material than a volume of Shakespeare or a copy of the Bible. The craft demands not only skilled fingers, but artistic sympathy, and a subtile insight into the thoughts of he author who wrote the book.

Perhaps I should more definitely state that the business is not one that offers great reward for the self-supporting young woman. But as showing the widening circle of women's work, it is worth attention. And if the young woman is especially qualified for it, artistically, physically, and, of course, practically, she might, after havng been learned the trade, turn a few dollars into her pocket by practising it in her own town. For there are lovers of artistic binding and fine binding in almost every community.

AGNES OLCOTT.

Education.

Says Lavasseur, "The nineteenth century is the first which has systematized and generalized the education of the people for the value of education itself." That is, in truth, the cardinal event in the pedagogic history of the century—the popularization of education.

Before its dawn the children of the poor were practically debarred from the advantages of even rudimentary schooling. The charity school was only a staccato phenomenon in the largest cities. Its very name, in its suggestion of social stigma, is symbolical of the wide difference between itself and the modern free school. Moreover the charity school was a private endowment, while the free school is paid for, owned and utilized by the people of the State.

That it is one of the greatest duties of the State to promote the morality intelligence and well being of its citizens by offering them the opportunities of instruction in youth is a modern conception. Education, once extended as an occasional alms, is now claimed as a universal right. Enlightened governments recognize that the illiterate cannot become good citizens and that mental development leads to moral and physical improvement.

Bavaria is entitled to the credit of the first general system of public schools, and to the passage of the first law for compulsory education. This was so early as 1802. But if the United States was not the leader in the movement, it has made the most progress. To-day education is free in primary and grammar schools in all the States, and in high schools in most of them, while many States have free universities.

A Good Idea.

The idea that a limit of some kind should in some way be placed on the amount of property which one man can inherit is an old one, and comes up from time to time in the discussions of political economists; yet lawyers have seemed to steer clear of advancing any suggstions as to the feasibility or righteousness of possible enactments looking to the regulation of this matter. Just now, however, the subject comes up again, and this time it originates among lawyers themselves. The president of the New York State Bar Association addressed that body at Albany recently on "The Limitation of Inheritances," advocating the placing of a $10,000,000 statutory limit on inheritances, making the following points: (1) No good purpose is served by giving a man power to transmit a larger sum of money. (2) The great power which great wealth gives cannot be entrusted as safely to those who inherit the wealth as to those who acquire it by their own exertions. (3) No vested right would be infringed and no injustice done to any one by the proposed change. His reasoning somehow sounds like good common sense.

A Legal Event.

A curious accident insurance case is reported from Iowa. The plaintiff was injured by falling from the cupola of a barn whither he had gone on Sunday to catch some pigeons to cook for dinner. In a suit to recover compensation from teh Imperial Accident Association in which he was insured, the defendant contended that the plaintiff had assumed an unnecessary risk which avoided the policy. The contract of insurance, however, referred to the occupation of the plaintiff as that of a housepainter, and the Supreme Court of Iowa holds that it contemplated the assumption of just such risks as he ran in his excursion after the pigeons. Another defence was that at the time of the accident the plaintiff was engaged in a violation of the Sunday law; but this position was also declared to be untenable, as the Sunday law would not be violated if the pigeons were intended for a Sunday meal.

One of the latest theories advanced is that dreams may be stimulated by artificial means, such as musical sounds or perfumes, and that we may, after assiduous study, be able to produce such visions as we please. Having learned how to dream to order, we have also been instructed how to find ghosts. The process is simplicity itself. You take a globe full of water and gaze steadily therein for the space of ten minutes. If you see nothing wonderful, be not discouraged, but try again, and yet again. If on the third effort no supernatural revelation ensues, you will know that you are not a "ghost-seer," and that you never will be.

THE BOER SOLDIERS

WHY THEY ARE SUCH EXCELLENT MARKSMEN.

How the Field Cornets Gathered Their Forces When War Was Declared—The Transvaal Regulars—The Military System.

(Correspondence From South Africa.)

When in 1848 the Boers treked into their present country to escape the oppression of their foes they found themselves face to face with hostile hordes of savages, ever on the alert to cut off stragglers and to attack isolated farms. Then was laid the foundation of the present military system of the Boer.

The farms of the Boers lie scattered over the whole of the country. Transvaal itself is larger than Great Britain and Ireland, and the population does not exceed now 289,000 white burghers, the foreign-born population not counted. The country is divided in field cornetships; that is, military districts under the command of a field cornet. These stand in the closest communication with every single farm in the country. In times gone by a messenger from a farm would inform the field cornet of an attack by natives, and even then the mobilization system was so perfect that with the greatest of dispatch the population of the whole district was alarmed and came to the rescue. As to the constitution of the Boer army, every male from 16 to 60 years of age is liable to military service. In the Transvaal the male population liable to military service is according to the latest census in the neighborhood of 30,000 men. The disproportion to the number of the whole population is explained by the numerical superiority of women, great number of children in individual families (8 to 14 years), the ripe old age to which the Boers attain, &c. From the age of 5 the Boer child is accustomed to feel at home on horseback. At a very early age the boy is taught to handle the rifle. The constant Kaffir fights, encounters with the Zulus, Bechuanas and Basutos have made the Boer proficient in the arts of war. A great deal of his time the Boer spends on horseback or in the ox-wagon, trekking from one part of the country to the other. His nomadic habits oblige him to get his dinner with his rifle. This is one of the reasons for his excellent marksmanship. The high price of bullets has taught him not to miss a shot. When a Boer has three bullets he can reckon on three meals. The story is told of a Boer who went with an English officer shooting springboks.

The Briton had a bagful of cartridges, the Boer only his rifle. "Where are your cartridges?" asked the Captain. "In my rifle; two springboks is all I can carry." "But suppose you miss?" "Nobody misses," answered the Boer." Therein is an explanation of their remarkable shooting.

With the introduction of the telegraph, and particularly since a war with England became inevitable, the mobilization of those burghers was put upon a thoroughly modern basis. Within an hour after the declaration of war every field cornet in the country had sent out his messengers to call the populace to arms. Every male from 16 to 60 saddles his horse, takes a supply of provisions, his rifle, his own ammunition and departs for the prearranged meeting place. Rifles and guns of the most modern pattern have been at various times distributed among the burghers by the government through the field cornet. The Boer goes to war willingly; he does not stick at the age limit; there are plenty of men above 60 and plenty boys merely 14 in the ranks. The height of the Boer, the average being five feet ten inches, and his splendid physique, make a fourteen-year-old Boer a fairly matched antagonist to the eighteen-year-old British soldier, of whom there are too many in the British army. The burgher who has thus been "commandered" to duty—this is the expression used to designate the calling out of the citizen troops—does not wear a uniform.

Besides these burghers there are two kinds of troops in the Transvaal. One consists of several thousands, not exceeding 5,000, artillery and about a similar number, but not exceeding 7,000 volunteers, organized similarly to our state troops. These are mostly settled near the cities, and meet occasionally for drill and exercise. The efficiency of the artillery is now a matter of history. The artillery, though small, is extremely well drilled, and has been instructed by German and French officers. These regular soldiers wear uniforms very similar to the British, with an admixture of the Dutch. For field service they are fitted out with khaki suits.

In addition to these troops there are Germans, French, Dutch, Irish and Afrikander contingents. Of the great number of Uitlanders in Johannesburg and in the Transvaal it is safe to assume the young and physically able, with the exception, of course, of the British, have placed their services at Oom Paul's disposal. The German contingent alone exceeds 4,000 men. The ceaseless flow of recruits through Delagoa Bay has greatly increased this foreign legion. Of the foreigners all are old soldiers, as in Europe every able man is liable to military duty.

The Hang of Your Hand.

There is a great deal in the hang of your hand when free and at ease. A man drops his hands to his sides by a purely unconscious action in the majority of cases, and all unconscious actions are important to a would be judge of character. Sit at the window and watch the passersby. The man whose first and little fingers are stretched straight down, with the two others curled inward, is endowed with accurate judgment and precise foresight.

If a long and well formed thumb hangs parallel with the outstretched fingers, all his actions will be the result of thought and his words well weighed before spoken. Unless the upper phalange of his thumb shows a tendency to turn outward, he will be too grave to be good company.

Another, whose forefinger alone points downward, is by profession a teacher—possibly a preaher. The same man, when listening intently, will llave a habit of resting the finger on his temple.

The forefinger and second finger, if seen hanging down close together, might denote the judge's clerk, whose business leads him to turn over papers with a hand constantly ready for the pen.

This instance might be brought forward in corroboration of the theory advanced by professors of palmistry who say that the seat of the will lies in the thumb.

Men exposed to the rigors of the Alaskan winter wear full beards to protect their throats and faces, but keep their upper lips clean shaven. The moisture from the breath congeals so rapidly that a mustache becomes imbedded in a solid cake of ice and the face is frozen in a short time.

More than $350,000 has been paid in for the grand opera season in New York, and the poorest seats are hard to get. This is in marked contrast with the reception accorded the Grau Opera company in Chicago.

FEAR OF HYPNOTISM

IT GIVES A SINGLE YOUNG MAN ANXIETY.

He Is Afraid He Is Going to Be Married in Spite of Himself, and So He Gives the License Clerk a Timely Warning.

Lowell Putnam is in a predicament. He is afraid he is going to be married. He doesn't want to be married yet he is fearful that he will awaken some morning and find a wife among his possessions. He believes that a certain young woman has set her cap for him and will carry her desire into effect by hypnotizing him.

Putnam called at the marriage license office yesterday and explained matters, partially. He did not go into many details, but he wanted it thoroughly understood that if he called at the Courthouse, and asked for a license to wed it was to be refused. He said he did not want a license and if he came for one it would be evident that he was under the hypnotic influence of the young woman who accompanied him.

These rather peculiar remarks led a member of the Republic staff to ask Mr. Putnam for an explanation. Mr. Putnam was at his home, 1121 North Leonard avenue, and he received the reporter in a room whose walls were literally covered with guitars, mandolins and violins. They were hung in racks which extended from the ceiling to the floor, and scattered about on tables and chairs were other instruments. Piles of music lay upon the mantle shelf and filled the bookcase. Mr. Putnam explained the array with the remark that he played a little sometimes. In the directory he is accredited with being a professional musician. He became ill at ease when the subject of his visit to the marriage license office was broached and said that hypnotism had caused him a great deal of trouble and notoriety which, he said, he was anxious to avoid in the future. After a time, however, he consented to say a little about the case.

"Some time ago I met a young woman who has since manifested an unusual interest in me. I did not mind this at first because she is refined and pretty. But a week or two ago I discovered she was in love with me and wished to marry me. Perhaps she did not say so in so many words, but I interpreted what she did say and her actions correctly, I know.

"Then I realized for the first time the power she had over me. I followed her merest suggestion without being able to tell why—except that it was hypnotism. Sometimes these suggestions were spoken, sometimes not. At any rate, I obeyed them."

It was remarked that perhaps Mr. Putnam, because of his previous experience with hypnotists, was an unusually good subject, and the young woman was simply experimenting upon him. Mr. Putnam shook his head.

"No; she has an object. I am not going to tell you how I found out it was her intention to marry me, but it was in a way that leaves no doubt in my mind as to her intentions. She has resolved upon it, and my trip to the license office was simply for my own protection. I have no objections to the young woman personally, but I do not intend to marry her if I can help it.

"I know from what I have done at her suggestion that it would be an easy matter for her to come here some mroning, place me in her power and compel me to obtain a license, and marry her. While in a hypnotic state my actions do not betray the fact to any one, and, therefore, no preacher would refuse to marry us. I know what is going on, but am powerless to break away from the influence which this young lady exerts over me.

"I explained matters at the license office fully, and told the man I saw there not to give me a license under any condition whatever. I told him that if I did apply I might plead ever so hard for the license and offer him any reward if he would issue it, but he must not listen to me, as I would be in a hypnotic state if I applied for the paper.

"Of course, if the girl learns of this —for I do not think she understands the complete control she has over me—she will probably try and get me under her control and take me to some other city for the purpose of marrying me. For that reason I have taken other precautions of which I do not care to speak."

Mr. Putnam refused to give the name of the pretty young woman who is trying to hypnotize him, and his brother Joseph, who is employed in a Washington avenue wholesale house, said he could not imagine who she might be. In fact, he was surprised to hear of the affair, he said. He claimed to know of no one whose actions might lead his brother to believe she was trying to marry him.

Mr. Putnam is about 30 years old. He received considerable advertising a few years ago when a hypnotist and spiritualist left town rather suddenly after interesting a number of young persons in his work. The occasion of his departure was a tragedy in which the son of one of the best known families in town figured.—St. Louis Republic.

Phonography.

Shorthand of a rudimentary sort was practised by the Romans. Jiro, the freedman of Cicero, introduced a system which was only an abbreviated longhand. The ideal held before them by inventors of more modern systems is more rapid and accurate. It is described by one of the early fathers of the art, Peter Bales (1547-1610), in these words:—"To write as fast as a man speaketh treatably." He acknowledges that this may seem hard saying, but insists that in effect the method is very easy, "containing a many commodities under a few principles, the shortness whereof is attained by memory, and swiftness by practice, and sweetness by industry."

Not even an approximation, however, to this ideal was reached until 1837, with the publication of Isaac Pitman's system of shorthand, entitled "Phonography." He revolutionized the art by making his tenographic signs represent the sounds of the English letters. Other inventors like Anderson and Taylor, have made more or less important improvements upon Pitman's system, but Pitman remains the master mind of modern phonography and his books the master works in this line of human achievement.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and othaches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by Grissom & Fordham.

Millions will be spent in politics this year. We can't keep the campaign going without money any more than we can keep the body vigorous without food. Dyspeptics use to starve themselves. Now Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and allows you to eat all the good food you want. It radically cures stomach troubles. Howard Gardner. Aug.
